

Case study

By The Regenda Group

The Regenda Group became a member of the Consortium in 2015 and to utilise two of our framework agreements – Asbestos Management Services and Property Safety and Security.

Andrew Grice, Asbestos Compliance Specialist at The Regenda Group talks about his experience of working with Consortium Procurement:

“Consortium Procurement’s greatest asset is the expert advice and personal attention we have received. When choosing a framework supplier, we had a lot of different needs that needed to be met. We received considerable advice and guidance that continued through the process of further competition and the engagement of new contractors.

As an organisation we have found the procurement process to be excellent, there were clearly defined roles and tasks set out with agreed timescales. The framework specifications clearly met our needs and the number of contractors appointed on the different frameworks has ensured a great response to further competitions.

The greatest benefit of working with the Consortium Procurement team is knowing that our contracts have been procured compliantly and framework specifications are robust and suitably sufficient for our needs. It is also reassuring that the procurement team have tested the market and driven value for money for The Regenda Group.”

The Regenda Group is based in Bolton and has around 13,000 properties around the North West.
